Reaches Favorable Accord with ICANN

Last night, VRSN and the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) were able to reach an agreement to their lawsuit. The terms of the agreement are more favorable than we had expected, and include potential price increases we believe are highly likely to occur.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Resolution achieved. VRSN and ICANN announced that they were able to reach an agreement to their longstanding lawsuit. The dispute initially emanated from a VRSN service called SiteFinder that redirected Internet users from mistyped or unregistered web addresses. We believe the agreement still needs to be officially approved by both parties and the U.S. Department of Commerce, but do not anticipate any major hurdles. Positive Factor
- Potential price increase beginning 2007. As per the agreement, beginning in 2007 VRSN will be allowed to increase the price for a .com domain by up to 7% per year (upon six months notice) to allow for continued investment in the DNS. Moreover, ICANN will be adding its own fees (similar to the revised .net agreement) on top of the registration price. The fees will be instituted starting in January 2006 at $0.37 per name and will increase to $0.45 in July 2006 and again in July 2007 to $0.50. Given the very strong .com domain name growth witnessed over the past several quarters (consistently growing 5-8% Q/Q), aided by burgeoning pay-per-click and blog sites, we believe demand is very price inelastic and expect negligible end-user fallout from higher prices. Positive Factor
- Potential effect. While we are not changing our 2007 estimates at this time, we believe it is highly likely that VRSN will raise pricing for .com (which had 40.5 mln names as of Sept. 30, versus 6.2 mln for .net). Preliminarily, we estimate VRSN could receive roughly $40 mln in revenue in 2007 from a 7% .com price increase coupled with the recently agreed upon allowance of a maximum 10% .net price increase. Altogether, this could add $0.07-$0.08 to our 2007 EPS estimate of $1.30. Positive Factor
- New services. Going forward, ICANN will serve as the technical coordinator of the DNS and there will be an up to a 90-day review period for any new services proposed by VRSN. While we do not believe the SiteFinder service will see the light of day, we think VRSN's Wait List Service (WLS) has some potential. Still, we would not expect VRSN to re-introduce that or any other service until the agreement is made official, which could take a few months. Regardless, we are pleased to see a specific methodology in place for evaluating value-added services. This agreement should lead to greater innovation and monetization for VRSN and the registry. Positive Factor
- Term extension. VRSN's right to operate the .com registry has also been extended until Nov. 30, 2012, and VRSN will continue to have a presumptive right of renewal. In short, our belief is that as long as VRSN is not in material breach of contract as deemed by ICANN and an independent mediator, the company will continue to run .com for the foreseeable future. Positive Factor
- Valuation. Using our revised 2006 estimates, VRSN trades at 20x, a 10% discount to the peer group average of 22x. VRSN also trades at an earnings multiple of only 17-18x our current 2007 estimates.

CONTRA CASE

VRSN's Jamba! mobile content business could continue to have increased churn for the foreseeable future. Also, VRSN could potentially see greater regulatory scrutiny and/or enhanced carrier standards that serve to constrain growth.
